

Executive Biography

Angela Fox

Vice President and General Manager-Dell Australia and New Zealand

Angela Fox is vice president and general manager of Dell Australia and New Zealand (ANZ). She is responsible for leading Dell's efforts to deliver innovative technology solutions to consumers, small and medium businesses, Dell partners, public institutions and large enterprises across the region.

Angela has 24 years of IT experience. Prior to taking on leadership of Dell's business in ANZ, she was the Singapore-based vice president and general manager of Dell's Services Business across Asia Pacific and Japan (APJ). Working in partnership with the Services leadership in the region, she was responsible for driving the growth for the Application and Business Process Outsourcing, Infrastructure Consulting, Managed Deployment and Managed Outsourcing lines of business. Before that she was executive director of Dell's APJ Services and Solutions team.

Angela has played a key role in driving the growth of Dell's Solutions business. In her seven years with the company, she has held various leadership positions including executive director of Dell's Enterprise Solutions Business in APJ and executive director of Dell's Enterprise Solutions Business in ANZ.

Prior to joining Dell, Angela worked at IBM for 16 years where she held various sales and leadership positions.

Angela is a firm believer in Dell's people strategy, having launched the Australia and New Zealand Diversity and Inclusion Council, and being a founding member of the APJ Diversity and Inclusion Council. She will continue to promote diversity and inclusion in her current role.

Angela is based in Sydney where she lives with her husband and pre-school daughter. She holds a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Auckland.